

The Zepler Scholarship

Exclusive £1000 University Scholarships for Taster Course Attendees

The Department of Electronics and Computer Science (ECS) at the University of Southampton is delighted to announce the Zepler Scholarship Scheme. This provides £1000 for all students in the first year of their degree† who meet all of the following conditions:

- attended our Electronics and Computer Science Taster Course, and register for the scholarship before August 31 2018 www.taster.ecs.soton.ac.uk
- selected an ECS degree at Southampton as their firm acceptance through UCAS, and enrol on this programme in 2018
- meet (or exceed) their offer, and obtain at least A*AA at A-Level (to include/exclude any subjects specified in the offer wording)
- are UK/EU students

Professor Eric Zepler

Eric Zepler founded the Department of Electronics, Telecommunications and Radio Engineering at Southampton in 1947. It was the first electronics department in this country, and probably in the world. Today, the building containing the department's undergraduate teaching laboratories is named in his honour.

† Scholarships are payable at the end of the first term of study in year 1. All information correct at the time of going to print (October 2016). Students may only receive one scholarship from the University of Southampton in any one year (however they may hold both a University scholarship and bursary)
