

Sureeporn Punpuing comments on:

Changes in Family and Household during China's Rapid Economic Development

Fei Mao (Australian National University)

Zhongwei Zhao (Australian Demographic and Social Research Institute)

Changes in family and household during China's rapid economic development

1. This paper will be a very good supplementary for the paper on the 'household formation and composition in China's ethnic minority population...'. This is because this study will present trend of household composition that would be changed during the last 30 years based on the China's censuses since 1982.
2. It's expected that this study will clearly explain the impacts of one-child family on demographic transition in China under the context of China's rapid economic development.
